

Abbey Decker, M.S.

Teacher of the Deaf

Biola University

B.S in Communication Sciences and Disorders

Mt. Saint Mary's University - The John Tracy Clinic

M.S in Special Education with an emphasis in Deaf Education

Nova Southeastern University

In progress: M.S in Speech Language Pathology

---

Abbey joined the Desert Voices team in June 2018. She has a Bachelor's Degree in Communication Disorders from Biola University and a Master's in Special Education with an emphasis in Deaf Education from Mt. Saint Mary's University/The John Tracy Clinic. Abbey is currently working on her Master's of Science in Speech Language Pathology from Nova Southeastern University.

Abbey, a California native, moved to Arizona after three years of teaching preschool students with hearing loss in Illinois. Although Abbey's primary experience has been preschool she has also worked as an Itinerant teacher with students from preschool all the way to high school. The opportunities to work at different schools in different positions has provided her a diverse teaching experience that has better equipped her to support families and students.

When Abbey is not at Desert Voices, she enjoys spending time with her family (she has a lot of fun nieces and nephews in her life ) getting outside and volunteering at church. She loves to travel and experience different cultures as much as she can. Some of Abbey's favorite international destinations have been Portugal, France, Mexico, Italy, Africa, and England. One of her favorite vacations was a family trip to Africa where they got to experience the African coast. Abbey also loves getting to spend time at the dog park with her spunky dog, Stetson.

